HEPBURN.

In 1953, Audrey Hepburn, who was not yet famous, went to visit Givenchy, a fashion designer who had just created her own brand, in order to find costumes in new plays. When Givenchy heard that Miss Hepburn was going to visit him, he intuitively thought it was Catherine Hepburn, the big star, and was full of expectation. Unexpectedly, when he opened the studio, he saw Audrey Hepburn, who was just on the road. Givenchy was disappointed. But because of this encounter, Audrey Hepburn and Givenchy, who are two years older than her, have established a deep friendship of 40 years. The love between big stars and famous designers has become a good story in Hollywood

Maximize the value of traditional crafts and create unlimited possibilities for life

Luxury is like a "street word" that everyone and every industry can use it, but what is the real luxury? Exaggerated designs, rare materials, complicated processes..... Maybe they are all, but they are not at all. As a top craftsman of Hermes said, "If there is no extreme details, how to talk about luxury?"

How can designers create their own soul destination? Designers who advocate minimalist functionalism believe that design should lead a better life. It is not a simple homing function, presenting aesthetics, but a choice of lifestyle.
